OpenOffice.org Resources

OpenOffice.org is a collection of very powerful and complex component parts and you cannot become an 'instant expert' in using all areas of each component. The most common functions that you would normally use are similar to or the same as other flavours of that component (e.g. Wordprocessor). There will, however, be times that you wish to perform a function that is unusual. The web sites listed below will take you to help as well as using the online help. You can find many items of support as well as the manuals for each component or the whole suite. You can also find templates and extension that will help complete the task you are working on at the time.

I usually recommend that you refer to the help or manual when you need the assistance and then work your way though the task you are working on. By doing this, you will remember how to perform that function better by doing it rather than by just reading about it or being told about how to do it.

URLs for Information about OpenOffice.org

OpenOffice Home Page   http://www.openoffice.org/

OpenOffice Manuals   http://documentation.openoffice.org/manuals/

OpenOffice FAQs   http://wiki.services.openoffice.org/wiki/Documentation/FAQ

OpenOffice Support Page   http://support.openoffice.org/

OpenOffice Downloads   http://download.openoffice.org/index.html

OpenOffice Templates   http://templates.services.openoffice.org/

OpenOffice.org Extensions   http://extensions.services.openoffice.org/

OpenOffice.org is a full-featured office suite that can fulfill many of our needs. You are limited only by your imagination on how you can be productive with this package.